Martin Luther Betrays Catholic Church for the Good or Bad

Awesome

Samuel Gibbifert, 1517- Martin Luther, a young monk who was once loyal to the Catholic Church in Wittenberg, Germany, was found nailing ninety-five different reasons of why he disagrees with the Catholic practices, on the front door of the church itself. Luther claims that the sale of indulgences is wrong and that a piece of paper cannot erase your sins and grant you a free trip to Heaven. He states that faith alone will save you and that priests have no special powers what so ever. In ^{response} ~~conclusion~~ to his brave actions, he was banned from the church, but not before many others began to question the Catholic faith and follow in Luther's footsteps. "It's about time someone stands up to that rotten church," Harry Fredlint says, "I'm all for Martin!" Unfortunately, this is not how the Catholic churches react. Luther has now stood up for his true beliefs, but caused many people to die in a result of his protests. The leaders of the Catholic Church are grabbing ahold of anyone with the slightest doubt of the church and its practices, and torturing them to the death. "They are just scared! They know that you can't get to Heaven with an indulgence and now they are killing people to shut us up!" Clarice Millburn proclaims while weeping at her husbands burning. A few nights ago the leaders stretched her sister to death and Clarice knows she is soon to follow with a punishment of cutting off her arms and legs. But this doesn't stop her faith or the strength of the other protestors as they stand strong for what they so powerfully believe in.
